1. Socrates went round the town on foot and talked to people. The Athenians began to look for his familiar figure in the streets and to say to their friends, "yes, that's Socrates, come along and talk to him." After sometime Socrates became famous as a teacher. He wandered along the roads and stood in the market places, talking to anyone who cared to greet him. The listeners were often confused after they had argued with him or answered his questions. Socrates told the countrymen that everyone must learn to think of himself, so that by using his reason he would have the power to see what was right, just, true and beautiful and so shape his own conduct. He wanted Athens to be a perfect state. He told everyone-both his pupils and his followers-that, this could only happen if every citizen educated his own mind to see what was right and hoble.
