4. Read carefully the passage given below and answer the question that follow:

Most of the people who appear most often in history books are great conquerors and generals strangely enough the people who really helped civilization forward are often never mentioned at all . We do not know who made the first boat or calculated the length of the year but we know all about killer and destroyers. We raise statues to them simply because they fought bravely. But even animals fight . So do savages. To fight is not civilized . Moreover, there are other ways of setting quarrels among men and nation . So really civilized people have been those who have brought peace and happiness to mankind .They have been prophets, saint,doctors,inventors and discovers.They have bee really great since instead of inflicting pain and hardship upon humanity ,they have healed their wounds. instead of killing , they have saved human lives.They are really civilized and deserve our admiration and respect.

When we speak of 'the freedom of press'. We usually mean freedom in a very technical and restricted sense - namely, freedom from direction or censorship by the Government. In this respect, the British press is under ordinary conditions, singularly free. It can attack policy and political character or ministers, interfere in the delicate machinery of foreign diplomacy, conduct campaigns to subvert the Constitution, incite citizens to discontent and rebellion, expose scandals and foment grievances, and generally harry and belabour the servants of the state, with almost perfect liberty. On occasions, it can become a weapon to coerce the Government to conform to what it asserts to be the will of the people.

One of the most widely spread bad habits is the use of tobacco. Tobacco is now smoked or chewed by men, often by women and even by children, almost all over the world. It was brought into Europe from America by Sir Walter Raleigh four centuries ago, and has thence spread everywhere. We very much doubt whether there is any good in the habit, even when tobacco is not used to excess : and it is extremely difficult to get rid of the habit when once it has been formed.

61. Read Carefully the passage given below and answer the questions that follow :

We had read a lot about Victoria Falls and had long dreamt of taking a close look at this awe-inspiring and magnificent spectacle of nature. At last the dream came true. I was standing on a huge rock on the edge of the Rain Forest. A vast panorama of magnificent shapes and colours stretched in front of me. Looking down I saw the grey mist rolling up from the abysmal depth. Hundreds of dragon flies were diving in and out of the falling rain like flying emeralds. Right in front of me, on the other side of the abyss, I saw the Zambesi sliding over the milelong edge of the precipice. The sight was frightening, but it was also beautiful. One loves to see the mass of water tumbling down. But the spectator is blinded by the spray and deafened by the roar.

Question :

(a) What are two adjectives which best describe the Victorial Falls ?

Science has affected our life in innumerable ways. It has revolutionized transport and communications and thus made the world smaller. It has also made the world of a better place to live in. We have well-lighted cities with good sanitation. Science has provided all kinds of substances. Science has provided all kinds of substances and machines and sources of power. There is almost no end to the benefits that science has conferred on us. All the same, the work of science is no unmixed blessing. It has created new problems. Science has rendered life in cities less healthy. The overcrowding in the cities, the air pollution largely because of smoke, cheap food deficient in vitamins—these are all dangerous to health. Again, people in big cities are denied sunlight, fresh air and exercise. Science has to attend to all these problems.

Science has also to take up the problem of social life itself. It has to work for freedom from war and various social and economic evils. Science can deal with these human affairs. There would be fewer follies, happiness and good feeling all round if we applied the scientific attitude to all our affairs. Properly using science and cultivating the scientific spirit man can control his destiny.

In India we are most particularly concerned about the primary necessities of life of our people. We are concerned with clothing, shelter and housing for our people with education, health and so on. Unless you have these primary necessities, it seems futile to talk about the life of the mind or the life of the spirit. You cannot talk of God to a starving man, you must give him food. One must deal with primary necessities, it is true. Nevertheless, even dealing with them one has to leave some kind of ideal or objective in view. If that ideal or objective in view somehow becomes less and less connected with growth of the human mind, then there must be something wrong.

13. Write a precis of the following passages and give a suitable title:

The test of a great book is whether we want to read it only once or more than once. Any book, which we want to read the second time even more than we wanted to read it the first time, is really a good book. Every additional reading will help understand it better. A book that a person of good education does not care to read more than once is probably not worth much.
